Market Perspective: Volatility Remains Low As Indexes Reach New Highs

For the month ending June 10th, the Russell 2000 and Nasdaq finally staged meaningful rallies in addition to the S&P 500 Index and Dow Jones Industrial Average setting new all-time highs. The Nasdaq rallied a solid 6.54 percent and the Russell 2000 climbed 5.91 percent. The S&P 500 Index also performed well, up 3.85 percent. Over the past two months, the Nasdaq has been the best performing index, up 7 percent, while the S&P 500 Index is up 6.42 percent. In the case of the Russell 2000, which is only up 3.99 percent since April 10, most all of its gains this year have come over the past three weeks.

This strong period for the stock market is also one of incredibly low volatility. The equity, bond and currency markets are all experiencing their lowest volatility in years. It has also been a period where the estimate for first quarter GDP in 2014 slipped to negative 1 percent. The GDP report didn't dent stocks; in fact, the markets by and large ignored the weak Q1 result. The final estimate of Q1 GDP will be released at the end of June, but investors have already turned their focus to Q2 GDP growth and the upcoming earnings season.

It is even more encouraging that recent economic data has been strong. The trade deficit increased sharply in April, a positive sign for the economy since a larger deficit indicates the economy is growing faster. The U.S. has done little to deal with structural problems causing the large trade deficit, and while increased energy production is reducing the need for energy imports, it's still the case that the stronger the economy gets, the larger the trade deficit will grow. While May data has not yet been released, China reported solid export growth to the United States, which is a very good sign for the outlook of our domestic economy.

Railfax also reports a strong increase in railcar loadings through the end of May. Railcar loadings are cyclical: they are low during most of the winter season, pick up in early spring before peaking in late autumn. This year's spring pick-up has been rapid and suggests expectations for the economy to show further improvement over the second half of the year is on course.

Market strength was concentrated in the largest sectors over the past month. Technology, the largest sector in the S&P 500 Index, beat the S&P 500 by 1.5 percent. Financials, the second largest sector, beat the index by 0.55 percent. The other two winning sectors were industrials and cyclicals, both beating the index by approximately 1 percent. In contrast, utilities underperformed the index by 2.62 percent and consumer staples underperformed by 2.41 percent.

Clearly, investors have rotated out of defensive sectors and moved into economically sensitive sectors. Nevertheless, the bullish tide lifted all boats, as utilities still gained more than 1 percent in the past month. We continue to stress a measure of caution during this period. While it is easy to become overzealous and chase returns, remember, more volatile sectors can easily give up gains as quickly as they were achieved. For that reason, our model portfolios will remain focused on the long-term; by investing in positions we believe are risk appropriate and not overweight areas that have run-up dramatically over the past few weeks.

Overseas we have also witnessed very solid returns. There was a strong rally ahead of India's election results and investors have yet to take profits – though a correction is still likely. Very recently, Brazil funds have begun challenging their highs for the year. Both emerging markets funds and broader indexes such as the MSCI Emerging Markets are at their highest level in over a year. Again, we would urge you to exercise caution and be prepared for increased volatility if you choose to invest in these markets.

In Europe, the European Central Bank (ECB) decided to cut deposit rates (for banks and governments who keep money with the ECB) to negative 0.10 percent. This ignited interest in markets such as Portugal, Italy, Ireland, Spain and Greece, who all suffer from large debt burdens. The ECB is also considering further actions, including a possible quantitative easing policy. Viewing Europe as a whole, this policy doesn't elicit optimism about the economy, especially with inflation still in decline. Still, for markets such as the ones mentioned above, ECB policies will be positive. As investors, Europe's equity markets are much more attractive if the ECB engages in additional monetary stimulus.

The portfolios performed very well last month and we will not make any changes. We expect the U.S. markets will perform well, especially with economic data picking up over the next few weeks. Europe appears in good shape with the ECB's printing presses being put to use. Some concerns remain about China and, by extension, emerging markets. Only a few days ago fraud in the commodity financing system of China, where traders use copper and other metals as collateral for loans, was exposed. The evidence from the stock market, with emerging market indexes climbing, tells us that either the concerns about China are overblown or the market is not taking them seriously. We will likely not have a clear understanding of the state of affairs in China over the next month, but by late summer the economic trend should be clear. Until then, it pays to be a bit more defensive with regard to China and emerging markets.

Portfolio Updates

We will make no changes to the Model Portfolios this month.

The S&P 500 Index advanced 3.85 percent over the past month, ahead of the 2.19 percent gain in the Dow Jones Industrial Average. The Nasdaq led with a 6.54 percent gain, beating the 5.91 percent advance in the Russell 2000. The MSCI EAFE trailed with a 2.13 percent return.

Since the portfolios' inception on April 10, the Nasdaq is up 7 percent; the S&P 500 Index is up 6.42 percent; the DJIA has climbed 4.80 percent; the Russell 2000 is up 3.99 percent; and the MSCI EAFE has gained 2.77 percent.

The Vanguard Aggressive Growth Portfolio rallied 5.10 percent over the past month. The portfolio was led by big gains in Information Technology (VGT) and Emerging Markets Select Stock (VMMSX). Brazil, Taiwan, India and Russia are four of the five top countries in VMMSX and all four of these markets have done well as of late. This portfolio is up 6.63 percent this year.

The Vanguard Straight Growth Portfolio climbed 3.89 percent. Small Cap Growth (VISGX) reversed its poor April performance and advanced 5.77 percent between May 10 and June 10. Vanguard Selected Value (VASVX) also turned in a solid rally of 4.92 percent due to the fund's midcap orientation. Dividend Growth (VDIGX) lagged, a result of weak performance from some dividend paying sectors such as consumer staples. The fund still returned 2.34 percent. The portfolio is up 5.52 percent this year.

The Vanguard Balanced Growth Portfolio climbed 2.73 percent over the past month and is now up 4.92 percent since inception.

Vanguard High Dividend Yield (VYM) led the portfolio for the second straight month, up 3.40 percent. Equity Income (VEIPX) also provided a 3.40 percent gain. Bonds remained strong as well, and Wellesley Income (VWINX) climbed a respectable 1.33 percent.

The Vanguard Conservative Income Portfolio advanced 1.76 percent over the past month and is now up 3.00 percent since inception. Equity Income (VEIPX) led the portfolio with a 3.40 percent gain, while Convertible Securities (VCVSX) advanced a solid 2.78 percent. High yield corporate bonds remained subdued, with only a 0.79 percent advance.

The NTF Aggressive Growth Portfolio gained 5.26 percent over the past month. ClearBridge Aggressive Growth's (LMPFX) heavy weighting in technology shares paid off in May as the fund rallied 5.39 percent. Baron Energy and Resources (BENFX) was the leader for the second straight month though, up 6.07 percent. It's an impressive result considering the energy sector underperformed the S&P 500 Index during this period. PRIME-CAP Odyssey Growth (POGRX), which was weighed down by biotechnology last month, reversed course and climbed 5.95 percent. The portfolio has gained 6.29 percent since inception.

The NTF Straight Growth Portfolio advanced 3.10 percent and is now up 4.99 percent this year. Wasatch Long/Short (FMLSX) rallied 2.76 percent, a good result for a hedged fund. Vanguard Selected Value (VASVX) was the best performer, up 4.92 percent. FAM Value (FAMVX) contributed a 3.43 percent gain.

The NTF Balanced Growth Portfolio climbed 2.00 percent over the past month; it has now gained 3.60 percent since inception. The portfolio was led by the 3.40 percent rally in Vanguard Equity Income (VEIPX). American Beacon SiM High Yield Opportunities (SHYPX) also provided a decent gain of 1.11 percent.

The NTF Conservative Income Portfolio gained 1.57 percent over the past month. The portfolio has gained 2.74 percent this year. As was the case last month, bond prices have moved higher. However, by design, the bond funds in the portfolio have a low sensitivity to interest rates. With over 50 percent in bonds though, the portfolio is doing well this year, slightly behind the NTF Balanced Growth Portfolio.

The NTF Global Portfolio climbed 3.49 percent in the past month; bringing its since inception return to 3.85 percent. One source of weakness was the euro, which slipped ahead of the ECB's decision to cut interest rates to negative territory. Wasatch Global Opportunities (WAGOX) climbed 5.38 percent and led the portfolio thanks to its emerging markets exposure.

The NTF Absolute Return/Down Market Portfolio delivered a solid 1.14 percent return in the past month; it is up 1.74 percent since April 10th. Tocqueville Gold (TGLDX) climbed 0.31 percent in a rough month for the precious metal and mining shares. Vanguard Utilities (VPU) also struggled, up only 1.25 percent as investors rotated out of defensive sectors. Still, in a month when the Nasdaq was up more than 6 percent, the small gain was an excellent result for the portfolio.

User Guide

RANK: Our proprietary ranking system uses both technical and fundamental analysis to identify those funds expected to outperform over the following 6 months, on a risk adjusted basis.

ADVICE: Based on technical and fundamental indicators, we issue buy, hold and sell recommendations based upon expected future performance. We often avoid recommending funds that are extraordinarily volatile or are exposed to significant market risk.

PERFORMANCE RETURNS: YTD, 1-month, 3-month and 1-year returns are calculated each month based on the trailing returns. For 3-year and 5-year periods, returns are annualized.

YIELD %: We use the 30-day SEC Yield to provide the expected income generated by each fund, as reported by the fund in its most recent filing.

BETA: The 3-year Beta is the measure of the volatility, or systematic risk of the fund as compared to the market. A Beta of 1.3 will typically be 30% more volatile than the market.

STANDARD DEVIATION (SD): Also used to measure volatility, is determined from the monthly returns of the fund over the previous 3 years. Those funds with higher standard deviations are more volatile as compared to those with a lower standard deviation.

EXPENSE RATIO: The expense ratio is the fee charged by the mutual fund. This charge is deducted from the return of the fund, impacting performance. Please note, funds may have different share classes with varying expenses associated with each class.

Using International Funds in a Balanced Portfolio

With the recent rebound in many international funds, a number of subscribers have asked the following question: "How much international equity exposure should I have in my portfolio?" This question is not as simple to answer as it appears, though there is one general formula that most investors fall back on.

THE 25/75 SPLIT

Research has shown that an investor with approximately 25 percent in foreign stocks and 75 percent in U.S. stocks will earn a higher return, with less volatility, than an investor with 100 percent in U.S. stocks. For passive investors, an allocation in this range may make the most sense over the long term.

Additionally, using the model portfolios in the newsletter, you can take a domestic portfolio based on your risk tolerance and use the Global Portfolio to provide more foreign exposure.

Sometimes it will make sense to overweight or underweight the U.S. based on expected returns. Over the past few years, investors who had 100 percent in U.S. stocks would have beaten diversified investors as the U.S. market outperformed relative to the rest of the world. As long as the U.S. continues to outperform, there's a case for leaning towards the low side on foreign exposure. Looking forward it may make sense to increase foreign exposure as domestic equities become overbought.

A slightly higher international allocation is fine for aggressive investors who want to take a global approach. As U.S. stocks are less than 50 percent of the world's stock markets, the case can be made for allocating a larger percentage to foreign stocks based on global stock market capitalization. Going above a 25 percent exposure would also meaningfully increase the volatility in the portfolio. In other words, up to approximately 25 percent foreign exposure, investors generally aren't sacrificing significant returns over the long-term and can lower the portfolio's volatility. Above that amount, the potential reward increases, but so does the potential risk.

HOME COUNTRY BIAS

Many investors are underweight international markets due to "home country bias." This bias is the tendency for an investor to overweight their home market in their portfolios, such as Americans overweight in domestic stocks or a Japanese investor owning a majority of Japanese stocks. This can lead to an increased level of volatility because investors are concentrating their portfolio in only one market. For Americans, living in the country with the world's largest stock market, the risk isn't as great as for someone in a smaller market such as Australia, but some degree of risk is still present.

This phenomenon extends beyond one's home country. Studies have shown that employees who receive company stock as part of a compensation plan tend to greatly overweight the stock in their portfolios. Warren Buffet has said "keep all your eggs in one basket, but watch that basket closely," and certainly there are many investors who spend a lot of time watching the performance of their current or former employer. However, there are also situations where being overweight has had disastrous results; for example, when the fraud surrounding Enron was identified, the stock collapsed. Luckily, an investor invested in a diversified equity portfolio made up of their home market faces far less risk than an investor who holds significant stake in a single stock.

Home bias exists because we are more familiar with market events close to us. Japanese investors know far more about Japan and Japanese stocks than foreign investors. An employee at Boeing knows far more about the company's condition than the average stock market investor. The point isn't that investors should never concentrate their portfolio, but they should be aware that they are doing so and consider whether it is appropriate, given the benefits of diversification.

Using International Funds in a Balanced Portfolio (continued)

As to the actual numbers, Americans have roughly 70 percent of their investments in U.S. equities, even though the U.S. market accounts for less than 40 percent of global stock market capitalization. This counts as overweight if you're looking at the entire globe as your investment universe, but as we've discussed above, this is a good mix based on the research. That said, this number is an average: some investors have a lot invested abroad, and some have very little. But if "the average American" investor existed, they are plenty diversified when it comes to foreign exposure.

CONSIDERATIONS WHEN CHOOSING INTERNATIONAL INVESTMENTS

Most mutual funds and ETFs report their country exposure based on the geographic location of the company headquarters, but is this the best way to evaluate the holdings? Companies such as Coca-Cola, Intel and Boeing all have foreign sales that exceed U.S. sales. The U.S. technology sector derives the bulk of its revenues from overseas and this will only grow as the U.S. shrinks as a portion of the global economy. This makes it challenging as the true exposure to domestic and international markets isn't always clear. Considering large multinationals dominate the market cap weighted indexes such as the S&P 500, investors overweight U.S. equities may not be as overweight the U.S. as it appears at first glance.

Some investors may consider multinational exposure a short-cut to foreign exposure, but while U.S. companies may be exposed to foreign economies and the global economy increasingly links global stock markets, home market bias means that individual stock markets are still not fully correlated. If investors were purely choosing investments based on fundamental measures such as valuation, they would sometimes overweight their home market when it was cheap, and other times underweight it when it became expensive. However, research shows this isn't the case: investors consistently overweight their own country's market, which contributes to differences in valuations. Furthermore, some of the variation in returns is driven by currency changes. When European stocks are outperforming, it usually is also a period when the U.S. dollar is weak (such as the 2000s). When U.S. stocks are outperforming, it is usually accompanied by U.S. dollar strength (the 1990s and post-2008).

Nevertheless, a higher overweight of domestic stocks can still make sense. One important reason is dividend payments. Among companies that pay dividends in the U.S., many make quarterly dividend payments, in some cases even monthly. For income investors, this steady stream of income is very important. Even more, many companies increase payments each year.

With foreign companies, the reliability of dividend payments is not as certain. Many firms abroad only pay dividends once or twice a year, and in emerging markets, for example, dividends can rise and fall based on profitability. When the U.S. economy experiences recessions, U.S. blue chips tend to keep increasing their dividends as a matter of policy, though they may slow the rate of increase. Abroad, firms may reduce payouts sharply and they may stay low until the company rebounds.

Another consideration is cost. Dividends may be taxed twice: once by a foreign government, and then again by the U.S. government. Fees are also higher: foreign funds tend to be more expensive than domestic funds. For example, Vanguard 500 Index charges 0.17 percent, but Vanguard Emerging Markets (VEIEX) charges 0.33 percent.

Ultimately, international investing can provide an important level of diversification to your portfolio. Determining the right mix of foreign funds relative to your goals, time horizon and risk tolerance can become quite complicated. It requires the consideration of country exposure, sector exposure and underlying holdings. Spending the time to understand your foreign holdings can pay off by reducing volatility and over the long-term, improving your investment returns.
